

Chen-Mou Cheng

National Taiwan University, Taiwan

Chen-Mou Cheng received his BS and MS in Electrical Engineering from National Taiwan University in 1996 and 1998, respectively, and PhD in Computer Science from Harvard University in 2007. He joined the Department of Electrical Engineering at National Taiwan University in 2007, where he is currently an Assistant Professor.

His research interest spans cryptology and cryptanalysis, information security and privacy enhancement technologies, computer and wireless communication networks, and high-performance embedded computing. He currently works in the area of high-performance cryptographic computing.